News From the Government.*Numerous Inquiries Received Daily by the Departments as to the Effect of the War on Commerce With the Flowery Kingdom—Growth of American Exports to the Orient.The Treasury and other departments have been receiving a great number of enquiries from business houses and others interested in the commercial relations of this country with the Celestial Kingdom, since the outbreak of trouble in the Chinese Empire, as to the effect that the present condition of affairs is having and is likely to have on the trade relations between the two countries. The statement is made that these enquiries are only less urgent than those of the relatives and friends of the missionaries.They predicate in a very striking way the recent rapid growth of America's exports to China and the value that the country has come to have as a market for American goods.Some of the most earnest demands for information come from some of the Southern States, where within the last few years a considerable trade in cotton goods with the Orient has been developed. Any blow struck at this new trade, such as would result from a state of war, or even of prolonged and general internal disturbances in China, would be very seriously felt. Similar effects would be felt also by the manufacturers and exporters of flour, mineral oils, and other commodities, including railway materials and supplies, and many other articles for which there has been a large and steadily increasing demand in the Orient, as well as by Americans who are interested in railway, mining, and other projects.The export trade of the United States with China has been making rapid strides in the last few years, and its volume has already reached large proportions. Ten years ago it amounted to less than $2,000, and last year it had increased to about $14,500,000, and had more than doubled in the previous four years. In 1899 the direct exports of cotton manufactures from this country to China amounted to $9,523,- 253, which was nearly 47 per cent of the total exports of such goods from the United States to all countries in that year, and eight times the total exports of cotton goods from this country to China in 1890.This trade has increased by leaps and bounds, and the cotton factories of the United States, especially those in the Southern States, entered the field of competition with the Manchester mills for the Chinese trade in the cheaper and coarser grades of cotton piece goods.In addition to the exports from the United States direct to China, it was estimated that from 40 to 60 per cent of those to Hongkong found their way into China, increasing the total from $14,500,- 000 to $17,000,000, or to $19,500,000. Of the $2,500,000 worth of goods exported to Hongkong last year, about four-sevenths consisted of breadstuffs. The exports of breadstuffs to China direct last year amounted to $1,414,331, while those to Hongkong amounted to $1,050,000, three-fifths of which would be $2,418,000.At Tientsin, which is now a centre of disturbance, the imports of American goods have been rapidly increasing. All these goods have to be transported through Hongkong and Shanghai. Tientsin is the point of accumulation and distribution of all the merchandise intended for consumption in the northern provinces of China. It contains a population of a million, and the province of Chi-Hai, in which Peking, only eighty miles distant, is situated, contains a population of about eighteen millions, although its area is the same as that of the State of Georgia. Tientsin is the terminus of two government railways—one to Peking, which has been partially destroyed since the beginning of the existing trouble, and the other running northeasterly to Shan-Kwan, also on the Gulf of Pech-lee.An elaborate railway is projected from Tientsin southward through the provinces of Shantung and Kiang-Su to Shanghai, a distance of about 700 miles. Shantung has a population of 35,000,000, and the population of Kiang-Su is 21,000,000. The three provinces mentioned have about the same population as the United States, although their combined area is only 165,553 square miles, about the same as that of New England, Pennsylvania and Georgia.If the existing disturbances in China shall be settled within a reasonable time and with suitable and satisfactory guarantees for the future preservation of public order and protection of the lives and property of foreigners, the railway development of the country will undoubtedly be rapid from that time forward, and a large market created for many kinds of American manufactures. American locomotives and other railway supplies and materials found their way into China last year for use on the Government railroads which radiate from Peking and comprise a length of about 350 miles.Among the railway lines projected, several of which are already in course of construction, is one from Canton to Han-Kow, on the Yangtze-Kiang River. This line has already been surveyed by a corps of American engineers and surveyors under the direction of W. B. Parsons of New York. The concession for this road was granted two years ago to an American company or syndicate, among whose members were Gen. Samuel Thomas, Hugh J.
Grant and Thurston Weed Barnes, of New York, the Carnegie Steel Company and others. The estimated cost of the line, which will be about 600 miles long, is $20,000,000.The road will traverse a rich agricultural region, containing a population nearly equal to that of the United States, and connect the great commercial metropolis of southern China with the important and populous city of Han-Kow. The former has a population of 20,000,000, and the latter 600,000. At Han-Kow the line will connect with the one now building under a concession to the same syndicate, and extending to Peking, a distance of about 650 miles.
The estimated cost of this line is $25,- 000,000. German capitalists are building lines through the province of Shantung, and several million dollars' worth of materials for the construction of the road have already been shipped from Germany.
These lines will tap the projected trunk line extending from Tientsin to Shanghai, a distance of about 700 miles.The combined mileage (estimated) of the several projected railways will somewhat exceed 2,500 miles, and when the project has been carried out China will be pretty well provided with railway facilities, and it will be only a short and easy step to the linking of the Chinese railway system with that of British India in the southeast and that of the trans-Siberian system in the northeast.KNABE
